

i/m in BlogLand

These are, in no way, attempts at reviewing other magic blogs. I haven't got the talent or temperament for that. These snapshots are nothing more than pointing those blogs that may be worthy of your attention.

b. d. erland's blog

I've never heard of the author - something which goes both ways, I'm sure. He's from South Korea and the blog is fairly new and still has a lot of energy and vitality.

You'll find a great collection of videos available. If your an Internet junkie, you will have seen most, if not all, of them, but it's great to have them all in one place. His reviews are the best and most complete of any site that I know of.

My favorite features are the frequent essays. The recent multi part series titled Thoughts On Exposure should be required reading for all magicians. It's an unfortunate title for some very provocative material.

Keep it up b. d. - whoever you are.

Take care.....

