

The Resurrection Blog Post

All good things start with great intentions. Seldom are they realized. I was very proud of some of the work done on this blog. Sure, some was lame or just plain terrible, but there were a lot of good posts. Discouragement over lack of engagement gradually turned into total indifference on my part.

This, unfortunately, isn't rare. One of the very few reliable blogs in existence, Canada's Magic, has a fairly long list of blogs. 80% or so or either dead or dormant (this blog never made the list). Maybe the day of the blog is dead and it's time to virtually throw dirt in the face of the entire process and move on. I don't know. I do know I dislike Youtube videos that go on way to long for my taste.

I've mapped out a few months and we'll see how it goes. No promises, except good effort.

